

Riding the Dragon: AH-64 Apache in Action in Afghanistan

Bowler looked down at the navigation pane on his MPD and selected the pre-planned route to their objective. He could feel the warmth of the midday sunshine through the Perspex canopy as both Apaches made their way to the medevac location, flying at 2000 feet and 120 knots. The ground beneath them rushed by as the turbines roar, coupled with the whoosh of the rotors, gave a warning that an Apache was on the move. The Apache had its own distinctive sound due to the aerodynamic rotor blades that were fitted to improve lift and speed, similar in design to those fitted to the Westland Lynx. Packed with a 30mm cannon, 2.75 rockets or Hellfire missiles it is a formidable foe. Some of the Apache systems are truly amazing such as being able to read a car number plate at 2 miles away with its 127 times-magnification day TV camera. A thermal camera so powerful it can identify a human at over 2 miles and spots of blood on the ground from half a mile. The Apache is the worlds most fearsome attack helicopter its pilots refer to flying it as Riding the Dragon.
